

To whom it concerns,

I don't think the FCC should do any thing to lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law. After all, we voted people in to get legislature passed.

Six months after I bought my current home, I started getting telemarketers two to ten times a day. This gets to be disruptive to my time off. I normally work ten hours a day, plus two hours for driving to and from home, so the few hours spent home is valuable. Last year, the Telephone Privacy law came into effect, I signed up, and the last telemarketer I got was last summer.

Please, do not lessen Indiana's Privacy law.

Thank you for your time,

Scott Bardonner
